Main Assets

ALOE JUICE

Obtained from the leaf of aloe barbadensis. This multi-benefit juice is widely used both in traditional herbal remedies and in modern cosmetics as a moisturizer, emollient, calming, refreshing and regenerating.

GLUCONOLACTONE

It is naturally present in the skin and it participates in cell renewal. It has long-term moisturizing power and promotes exfoliation. Minimizes skin blemishes, including those caused by acne and fine lines. Also skin tone.

VEGETAL COLLAGEN

Obtained from a mixture of 3 vegetable gums:

Acacia Senegal Gum: A typical plant belonging to the Leguminosae family. Has remarkable lifting properties with a simultaneous skin straightening and wrinkle filling effect. Its tightening effect reduces small wrinkles, redensifies the skin, restores tone and elasticity.

Hydrolyzed Rhyzobian Gum: Rubber based on polysaccharides, obtained from the fermentation of bacteria with vegetables. The gum supports the skin and integrates the reduction of skin collagen. Restores tone, firmness and elasticity to the skin.

Xanthan Gum: Is a polysaccharide obtained from the fermentation of corn starch with a bacterium (Xanthomonas campestris). It is a natural gelling agent that makes cosmetic gels perfectly transparent. With film-forming properties and a slightly tensor effect, it contributes to maintaining the hydrolipidic film of our skin and restores its tone and elasticity.
